This is one of our most popular conservatories. Imagine how its elegant three or five-facet design, easy adaptability to large or small gardens, and a selection of roofing options will complement your home.

Lean-to.

A practical, contemporary and economical solution.

With a Vevo Lean-to conservatory you'll maximize space and get the most from your home improvement budget. To tailor your conservatory even further, this style can be finished vertically as raked ends or hipped-back diagonally from its front corners.

Edwardian.

How will you utilise all the internal space in this most-versatile of conservatory designs? When you choose Edwardian's practical square-fronted design, distinction and usability go hand in hand with timeless good looks.

Gable front.

With stately pitched roofs and expansive gable-high glazing, an airy conservatory design that complements new or period properties, your Vevo Gable front conservatory is sure to turn heads.

P-shaped.

Tell us what you want; we'll show you the power of 'P' and custom-design, a versatile multifunctional living space just for you.

Take your conservatory to the next level.

The limitless possibilities of a Vevo bespoke Orangery is more than just the addition of an extra room to your property. We design a building that's just right for you, your home and your family, classic, contemporary or even a combination of both we can create the ideal living space.

Orangeries.

The Orangery is fast growing in popularity, but whatever the style or choice you make, an orangery is a real statement and addition to your home. Our designers will create a space that is not only practical but which is aesthetically stunning - one that complements the existing character of your home.

A more recent trend has been to introduce bi-fold doors so that the whole of one side can be opened up to the garden. And of course Vevo have this covered.

Build to your requirements.

A bespoke conservatory has limitless possibilities, so if a standard design doesn't fit your space; a Vevo bespoke conservatory is limited only by your imagination.

There's so much to consider when choosing a conservatory.

Mainly due to ever-increasing demands for better energy efficiency, glass technology for windows and conservatories is advancing very fast.

For up-to-date technical information when choosing your conservatory, there's no substitute for the help of a knowledgeable expert.

We'll guide you as you invest time with our designers to decide on the style, materials and accessories that are right for you. Don't rush! We don't do 'pressure selling'. Just a friendly, consultative design process that guides you towards the conservatory of your dreams.

Glazing.

Sealed units are normally made of internal and external glass panes, filled with air or another gas and separated around the edge by a spacer bar and sealant. We alter the rate at which heat or sound passes through sealed units by changing the properties of the panes, spacer bar or gas. The properties of the glass can also be enhanced with advanced coatings (usually on the surface inside the sealed unit to avoid damage).

Sound insulation.

In acoustic glass, for extra sound insulation, one side of the sealed unit is made of two thinner panes, bonded to each side of a sound-absorbing plastic film. Acoustic panes are typically about 7mm thick (two 3mm panes and a 1mm plastic film); the thickness can be varied for different levels of sound reduction. Being bonded, this acoustic glass is very strong while looking like normal glass.

‘ Whatever the weather, you need your roof to keep out the elements.’

Managing temperatures all year round.

For normal windows, keeping heat in is usually the priority. Some sealed units stop heat passing through in either direction, while others stop heat going out, but allow the sun's heat in (solar gain). For conservatories, solar gain is normally undesirable, so we usually fit units that stop heat passing in either direction. The sun's heat stays out in summer, while precious indoor heat stays in during winter.

Clever conservatory roofs.

Conservatory roof glass is normally similar to that in the frames, but with the option of an external coating to make the glass self cleaning when rain runs down it. This doesn't work so well if the roof is too flat for rain to run off fast enough – or for vertical windows that often don't get sufficiently wet. A roof pitch of about 25 degrees should work well.

It's the finishing touches that make the difference.

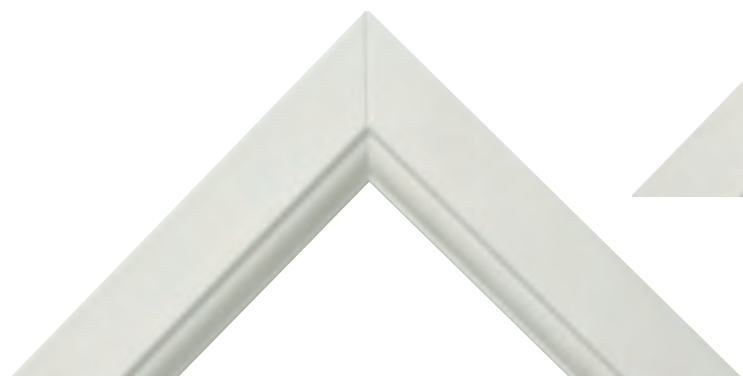

The contemporary styling of Vevo uPVC windows includes slimmer frames, which are sleek, unobtrusive in appearance and maximise the area of glass in your windows. That means more natural light in your home and a clearer view of the outdoors for you.

Virtually maintenance-free - Vevo windows don't rot, flake, rust or fade. All you need to do to keep them looking great is an occasional wipe with a damp cloth.

Frame finishes.

Whatever your preference, choose between our classically elegant VevoSculptured frame finish or the clean lines of VevoChamfered.

As always with Vevo it's about choice. You can have fully sculptured or fully chamfered, frames and beads, or mix the two – chamfered frames with sculptured beads.

VevoSculptured.

The sculptured option gives a more curvaceous, traditional decorative finish to your window.

Roof finishes.

- Choice of polycarbonate / glass
- Different shaped and coloured guttering
- Ask about our choice of finials and crestings.

VevoChamfered.

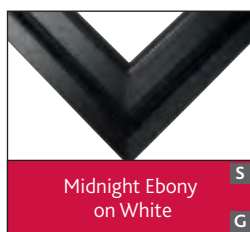

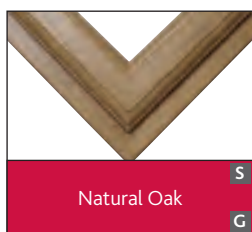

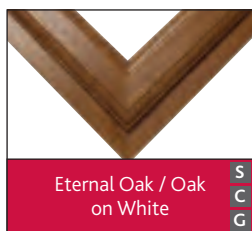

The chamfered option creates a symmetrical, contemporary, straight-edged style and might be considered a more modern look.

Available with two distinctive styles of beading.

The only limit is your imagination.

Standard colour finish options.

S Sculptured C Chamfered G Grained

uPVC Bi-folds also available in Natural Oak on White.

Special colour options.

Your chosen colour can be applied to windows, doors, conservatories and fascias using Kolorbond technology that chemically bonds the colour to the uPVC material. This process is guaranteed and is extremely colour stable and resistant to UV.

Vevo products are manufactured to the highest standards with a policy of continual improvement in products and materials. We reserve the right to change specifications without prior notice. Please also note that colours shown are for illustrative purposes as the printing process does not allow 100% accuracy on reproduction.
